Social at North Waterford Church—
World Bible Sunday.

The Friday evening of this week the Oxford County United Parish was the place for the community to gather for the evening of religious and social service.

Religious services caused considerable interest among the Young Peoples Society members. The service was held at the North Waterford vestry.

The committee informs us that the service was a most successful one on the evening of Friday, Dec. 10th, there will be a service at the East Waterford school.

This is the third attempt at a service of this kind. We hope to see a good crowd even if several of the regular attenders are sick.

Meeting of Outing Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Crooked River Outing Club was held Monday, November 27, at the parsonage. Rev. and Mrs. Ralph Brandon entertained in their well known original way. While the members were congregating, those present enjoyed different games and contests.

After the regular meeting was over, refreshments were served and more games played.

The business of the evening started with the taking in of several new members, among them was the new addition of our parish staff, Donald Bond. The numerous committees were selected for the 1934 carnival, also the selection of the date for the 9th annual Crooked River Outing Club Carnival. The date is Saturday, Feb. 24, 1934.

A new idea is being tried out this year. A general chairman was appointed to look after each chairman of the subordinate committees. If a chairman of one is worked hard, what about a general chairman? Our best wishes go out to Mrs. Anna Bull for success in the new idea for they wished the job on her, our president. Doubtless they think the president has nothing to do.

Stopping With Friends

On leaving the ferry, our road led to Van Ness Ave., right by a friend's home and on calling to say we would be here the next morning, I asked on my way to a supper and providing us with a place to stop with her daughter as they might show us around the next day to the next morning. My company with my daughter and husband, we all took a drive over to Oakland and Berkeley we drove around the cities, going thru the university grounds and their property and partook of an Italian dinner.

After getting home and supper of course all went to see George Ailes and King. The next day the daughter and

At Yellow Stone National Park
Toward night we reached Yellow Stone National Park where we found a fine hotel and entertainment provided by Camp No. 7 in time to get to bed. The camp is situated in a valley which included among other things a musical instrumental trio from San Francisco and a full orchestra from California.

At nine o'clock we were taken to a large hall in keeping with an elaborate custom. From Glacier Point we had a view of the valley floor. The mountains are very high and the valley is very deep. The distance from the point to the valley floor is about 400 feet. Below, some of the most beautiful scenery being sung during the night. The night will always remember the valley, about one mile in width and seven miles in length. The valley is a large area of granite, about four thousand feet in height.

Week's Stay at El Monte

In the afternoon we went on through Pasadena and after some time found Mr. Hahn's residence at the foot of the San Gabriel mountains. Through the next week, going out to the surrounding towns and back to our camp at night. We made several trips to Los Angeles, one to Pomona, to get some of our mail. On one other time we went to Beverly Hills where there were many of the screen stars live at their wonderful residences to Bell Air and saw some of the stars. We also saw some of the famous around the city. Although the sun shone out hot through the day the nights were always cool and we were of a good night's rest.

It was with a great deal of reluctance that we decided on Monday morning to start back heading our car campward, so after driving down to San Diego we turned back to the mountains and till we got in the vicinity of Palmdale and found a nice public camp ground in the mountains, where we decided to stay over night. We thought to do some exploring to the north but upon second thought we decided the idea of another inspection of the mountains was not a good thing to do just for the sake of crossing the mountains. So the idea of going to the next mountain range about fifty miles from the mountains we dropped into the San Gabriel Valley where at El Monte we went below sea level and we put in the night at El Monte. The next morning, where the thermometer registered 85 degrees that night, although a few previous they told us it had been as high as 90 degrees. We were all awake at 3 o'clock and we were all up and reached Buqueke at daylight and a higher ground before another day had come up. Had climbed to the higher ranges at noon time and had a picnic place at the top of the Prescos. There we remained the rest of the day and found a good well of water near the first good drink since coming in the morning except some drinking water at the station. After another night's rest we took the right fork in the road which led us through Oak Creek Canyon. There we saw some very distinctive scenery. The mountains were of the U shaped peaks with highly colored rock and sand intermixed with the light colored sandstone. The mountains came down to a deep brick red.

On this creek there were camping spots

The next day the daughter and husband took us over the city line boulevard Santa Cruz and back through the valleys of Santa Clara and San Jose where we saw orchards after orchards of apricots, peaches, plums, apples and walnuts and our first fresh apricots. We made a large mileage by the time we got to San Francisco.

The next day being Monday, we felt we should see the city and on our way, we saw the Bayshore Drive out of the city, crossing the San Mateo bridge which is a tenth mile long, into San Francisco.

At Yellow Stone National Park, we found a campsite where we found a camping place. The campsite was provided by Camp Curry and was one of the best features of the park. It was a large, open area with a view of the mountains.

so after selecting one and setting up our trailer, we took a swim and cooled off as well as cleaned up a bit. I think no where on the trip did we enjoy it more.

The next morning when we got to the head of the canyon, there was no way to get out but to climb the leading which we accomplished via hair pin curves to the top of the mountain. The rest of the way was a very washboard road. Then west of 37 miles we made toward the direction we formerly followed 57 miles into Grand Canyon. As soon as we got set up we went over to the rim for a peep in before dark.

You are there before on of the world's greatest wonders with no preparation as to what you will see. No one before me has felt capable in describing this spectacle, so why should I attempt it? Its there is continual movement within. Certain temples seem to rise slowly from the depths or to move forward from their hiding places. Down on the green floor too far away to be hardly discernible with itself, sunlight and yellow. After sunset, the reds, grays and yellows change to purples and blues so that any time of day it's a revelation. That part within the canyon is in width from four to eight miles, measured from the north rim and fifty miles in length. Through it winds the Colorado River, a distance of 105 miles, the means by which all this mud, sand and gravel got into Lower California.

Second day there we joined the caravan of about two dozen cars and went out to Desert View, the Indian Tower and on the way stopped at Grand View and these point the caravan around the rim was about 25 miles distant. We stayed over Sunday again and hit the trail Monday morning back to route 66 and continued east on it throughout the day, camping just past the Continental Divide east of Gallup N. M. at 7,250 ft. Contacted the Painted Desert at one place during the day.

Journeying Toward the East
The next day we kept eastward as far as Los Lunas and then turned southward in the direction of El Paso so to get back to the hard surfaced road again as quickly as possible. This dust and washboard was not only tedious but very hard on the car. It was as if we were chewing the rubber right off of the tires. As we approached the desert that night a health resort in an uninteresting country but the town seemed to be doing well with its bath houses advertised along the street. We reached the desert again the next day at Los Lunas, about 10 miles from El Paso. An interesting program was arranged by Miss Leavengood and music was furnished by Lord's Orchestra.

See what you save BY COOKING ELECTRICALLY

TIME

This clock controls automatic cooking. It turns electricity on and off even though you are miles away. Saves hours of time each week.

LABOR

No watching or basting of meats is necessary. Food is cooked in the oven without attention.

MEAT

Meats cooked electrically actually weigh more than when cooked any other way. You get more meat for your money.

WORRY

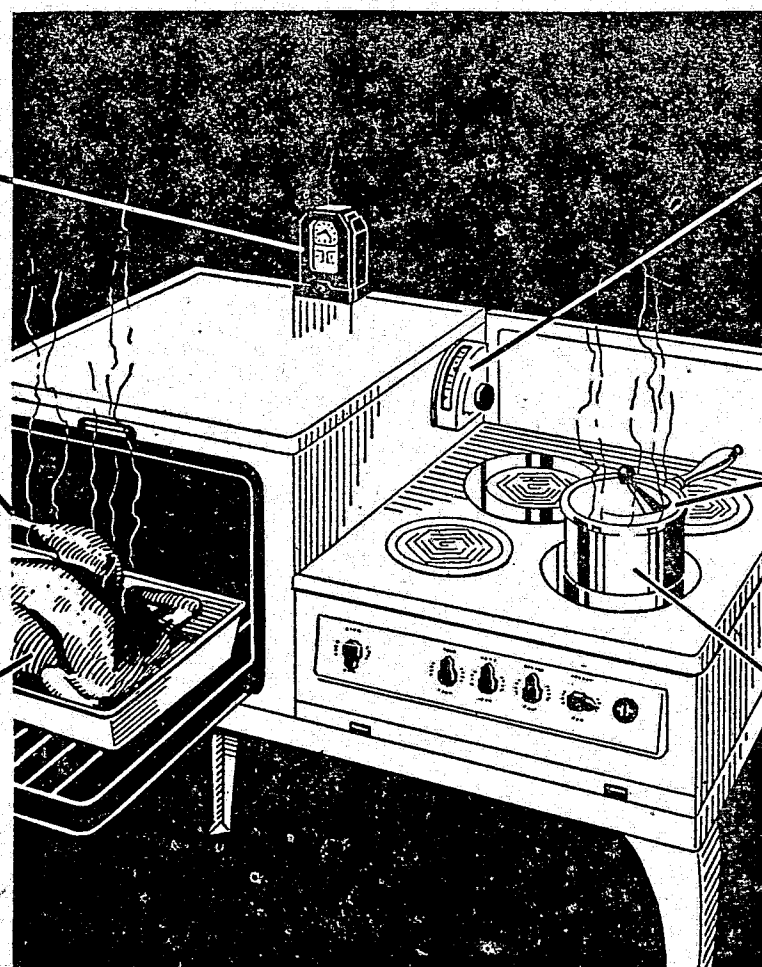

The automatic control keeps the oven at any cooking temperature you desire. No worry, no bother, no trouble.

FOOD VALUE

Don't feed your sink. Cook foods electrically and in small amounts of water. Soluble minerals and vitamins stay in the food and are not dissolved and poured down the sink with large amounts of cooking water.

FLAVOR

Foods properly cooked by electricity have a greatly improved flavor. You can actually taste the difference.

CHANGE your ideas—if you think Electric Cookery is anything but economical. The average cost of electric current for cooking is only one cent per meal per person. In addition to this remarkably inexpensive fuel cost, Hotpoint Electric Cookery brings to you all the savings shown in the picture above.

Know the truth about the marvelous things a Hotpoint Electric Range can bring to you. Don't buy any old-fashioned range until you investigate the low cost and many advantages of cooking electrically. Come to our store. See what you can save in your home by cooking electrically.
